What's Next?

I will admit, there are people who have asked me why I put golf shoes on Moon's feet and take pictures of him holding a golf club. I think the answer is simple, he is very willing and I love to laugh. We have a once in a lifetime relationship, one that impresses me daily with its complexity and depth. It is very clear that Moon tries to capture and keep my attention, he has entertained many with his impromptu pranks. He really does not have a repertoire of tricks, instead he is just willing to stand where I ask him to, hold what I ask him to hold and wear unusual costumes with pride. This is not to say he is perfect, he has embarrassed me on more than one occasion. I have to be very careful about laughing when he pulls one of his attention getting pranks, for once he notices I am amused, he will repeat the action. To be honest, this is a fault I can live with.

It seems that in our world today laughter is in short supply. Moon and I would like to contribute our efforts towards increasing the number of smiles by allowing others to share in our good times. Please accept, it's a gift.
